Shearer and Catherine Robertson

Local couple enjoys life in railroad depot

THE OLD SPOUT SPRING RAILROAD DEPOT is now home for Shearer and Catherine Robertson. The Robertsons remodeled the building's interior after they bought the structure for $335 in 1951.

By Frances Paulette

Once in a while you hear about someone sleeping in a railroad station overnight, for want of better accomodations, but how about living in a railroad station, day in and day out? Impossible? Not at all.....

The year was 1951 and Shearer Robertson and his wife, the former Catherine Torrence, had been married since May 1943. They were happy as larks but they needed a house, a home of their own. They looked and looked.

One day, Mr. W. H. Robertson, Shearer's father, and longtime postmaster at the Spout Spring Post Office, approached his son with a smile.

"Guess what, son, I've found you a house!" The smile on his face indicated Mr. Robertson's pleasure at finally being able to help his son and daughter-in-law with their housing problem. They would have a home. But wait.....

When Shearer went home and told his wife, Catherine, about his father's offer, she was delighted and began to ask questions.

Where was the house located? what kind of shape was it in? And, most important of all, how much was it going to cost?

"Catherine," Shearer began with enthusiasm, "Daddy has found out he can get the Norfolk and Western Depot for $335.00 and he'll give us a piece of land to put it on, isn't that great?"

All Shearer had to do was look at his wife's expression to see that the idea had not gone over too well.

"No, Shearer," Catherine said with a determined look, "I won't live in it! It can't possibly be fixed up to look like anything. Are you really asking me to live in the Railroad Station? No sir, never in a million years!"

Things change and people change their minds, and Catherine did; maybe it was because of the carefully drawn plans that Shearer's brother, the late David Robertson, had drawn for the finished interior.

They were good and interesting. An so, Shearer's father purchased the old Spout Spring Railway Station for the sum of $335.00.

The building which was completed in 1888 was moved from its original location approximately 100 yards below the present site. It was moved in 1951 with a stump puller. The total cost of moving and completing the basement was $950.00.

"My father and the late Robert Mitchell and his crew of workmen worked on it," said Shearer. "And within a year we were in it."

"We borrowed $5,000.00 to fix up the station and make it livable," said Catherine. "Both our daddys had to co-sign the note before we could get the money. They each had to declare their worth."

"We were really lucky," said Shearer, "A lot of people put in bids for the station but Daddy got it and he had land to put it on. That might have made a difference."

Within a year from the time the building was moved to its present location, the Robertsons had moved into their new home.

Since the house was completed the Robertsons have only added a deck.

Whe you enter the Robertson's attractive combination foyer-sitting room, you are in what used to be the ticket agents office. The original ticket window has been moved from the left side of the room to the rear where it serves as a phone nook.

On the left side of the sitting room is the master bedroom which was originally the waiting room for blacks, called in those days, "The Colored Waiting Room." Behind this is what used to be the "White Waiting Room" and it is now an attractive guest bedroom.

Directly across from this bedroom door are three steps that lead up into the freight room. This large area of space has been attractively divided into living room, dining room and kitchen-den areas.

The windows and doors are the original ones that were built into the station; the only new windows are the kitchen windows, the bathroom windows, and the picture window.

The original pine floors are still beautiful and the same flue is in use today. The home has an oil furnace but the Robertsons now heat with wood.

"The bathroom was once the filing room for the N&W Depot," laughed Catherine, "and the backyard still belongs to the N&W! We pay $5.00 per year for the use of the space. In fact, we have a 99 year lease on it," she laughed.

The structure is 60 feet long and 30 feet wide; in the basement there is a workshop on one side, and a pool table, belonging to the late Ryland Mann, is on the other side.

Part of the decor of the attractive kitchen-den combination are old tools and personal items belonging to the families of the couple.

Above the arch between the kitchen and den is an old crosscut saw that belonged to Shearer's father. Beside it hangs an old 'gambling pie", a device that was used in butchering hogs. This belonged to Catherine's father, the late Henry Augusta (Gus) Torrence. An old cane that once belonged to Catherine's grandfather, the late John Torrence, hangs along the wall with the tools.

Even though carpet, paint, and modern conveniences have transformed the old Depot into an attractive, comfortable home, it's still the same old Railroad Station underneath. It has been a happy home for Catherine, Shearer and their daughter, Sandra, now Mrs. Mickey Martin and the mother of two daughters, Roxanne and Julie.

"I have no regrets," smiled Catherine as she talked of her home in the railroad station, "it's home"!

Sewer hearing set for Nov. 1

The date for a public hearing on a proposed change in the Appomattox town charter which would allow the town to borrow money for its share of a new sewer system has been changed from Nov. 8 to Nov. 1, according to Town Manager Bill Britton.

The proposed change in the town charter would allow Appomattox to borrow up to $3.2 million to pay for its portion of the sewer system. Britton notes that the actual cost to the town will be approximately $500,000 or less.

Britton adds that the town is applying for a grant which would cover the town's portion of the new system. If the grant is approved, the town will not have to borrow the money. If the town does have to borrow the money, the loan will be set at five percent interest.

"We're hoping we won't have to borrow the money, that we can get the grant from the small cities block program," according to Britton.

If the town does have to borrow the money from the Farmers Home Administration, it will be in the form of a revenue bond, and will be paid from with sewer user fees, not with municipal tax funds.

The sewer program is required by state and federal environmental laws, according to Britton. He notes that the scope of the Appomatox sewer improvement project has been reduced. Originally, it appeared that the town would have to build a new system.

However, in recent months, environmental standards have been relaxed and the town will be allowed to expand it's existing facility.

Football meeting is Oct. 25

There will be a very important meeting held on October 26 concerning the Little League Football Program in Appomattox County.

The current football program will be discussed along with some ideas and recommendations which would have a tremendous effect on the future of our Little League Football Program.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, October 26, 1982 at the Appomattox Town Hall (over the Fire Station).

This will be a very important meeting and all parents, players, and other interested persons are urged to attend. The future direction and objectives of our Little League Football Program will be decided at this meeting.

Rita Marshall wins contest

Rita Marshall edged Peggy Marshall in a tiebreaker to win first place honors in last week's version of the Times-Virginian football contest.

Rita and Peggy accurately predicted the outcomes of all but two of the contest games, but Rita's predictions of the scores of the two tiebreaker games -- the Appomattox and VPI games -- were closer to the games' actual scores then were Peggy's predictions.

In fact, Rita came closer to winning the special $10 cash bonus than any contestant in recent years. The special prize is awarded to the first or second-place winner if he or she predicts the exact score of the Appomattox varsity game. Rita's prediction, a 40-7 Appomattox victory, was very close to the 41-8 actual score.

Rita will receive a check for $20 from the Times-Virginian and a free chicken dinner from the Chicken Palace restaurant for her first place finish. Peggy will receive a check for $10 from the paper and a free chicken dinner from the Chicken Palace for her second-place effort.

Five contestants -- Jim Cobb, R. A. Maxwell, Curtis T. Mayberry, Sr., Ron Guill and Lawrence Hamlet -- were closer in last week's contest, accurately predicting the outcomes of all but three of the 23 contest games.

The football contest continues this week. Full details can be found inside this issue of the Times-Virginian.

MS group to meet

The Appomattox MS Support Group will meet the fourth Tuesday of this month (Oct. 26) at 7:30 p.m. at Memorial United Methodist Church.

The meeting will feature a representative from the Charlottesville chapter of the MS Society.

In addition, Shirley Walton, VPI extension agent, will speak to the group on ways to remodel a home or apartment to accomodate handicapped persons.

The meeting is open to all MS patients, family, friends and other interested persons.

Bloodmobile visit set

Bloodmobile visit will be next Tuesday, October 26. Remember those needing blood are counting on you! Our quota has been increased due to the fact that 10 percent more blood is being used. Our quota is 110 and we did not quite make that on our last visit. Don't wait for someone else just come on over to the Liberty Baptist Church next Tuesday. You will be glad that you have had an opportunity to be so great a help to someone else.

Water use up

Per capita water use in the United States is higher today than ever. Each American averages enough water every year to fill 60 backyard swimming pools (1.6 million gallons).

The Robert E. Lee Soil and Water Conservation District wants to make sure the usable part of our water supply remains clear and clean. Districts throughout Virginia want enough clean "Water for You and Me" -- the theme for Natural Resources Conservation Week, October 17-23, 1982.

Governor Charles S. Robb has officially recognized the special week during which Virginia's 43 conservation districts will be sponsoring special activities to increase public awareness of our water as our other limited natural resources.

Those interested should contact Robert E. Lee Soil and Water Conservation District, 352-5610.

Although there is an important election coming up shortly, the big news continues to be in the world of sports. The baseball season has closed, with a strong world series, but football is in command, and with Ralph Sampson and basketball around the corner. The ACHS Raiders keep rolling, with Brookville here this week, and winding down with Altavista away and William Campbell here. Undefeated thus far, the Raiders are hungry. The state's major college teams had a dismal week-end. Except U. of Va., which played O.D. (Open Date). Maybe the best college game in the state last Saturday was Washington and Lee (3), Hampden-Sydney (0). And note that Slippery Rock defeated Clarian, 28-17.

There is another item of big business and that is leaf raking. You just cannot ignore it. October is a great month. Right. A mixture of Summer and Winter called Fall. But it is also the time trees let go fluttering leaves and they must be raked. It just isn't neat to let them be. I do not have much raking to do. Run the lawnmower through 'em and that's it. Had a failure with my figs this year. Only two small ones which neither I or the birds would bother with. Waited too late to clear out the honeysuckle.

For four years I did a radio program over a Lynchburg station and worked hard at preparing copy. Came across one of the manuscripts and it closed with the following poem, author unknown:
The rust will find the sword of fame,
The dust will hide the crown;
Aye, none will nail so high his name,
Time will not tear it down.

Who drives the horses of the Sun,
Shall lord it for a day . . .
Better the lowly deed were done,
And kept the humbler way.

The happiest heart that ever beat,
Was in some quiet breast;
That found the daylight sweet,

WOW honors Skutnik

The Woodmen Of The World, Camp 71 and Grove 6073 paid honor to five outstanding citizens and Lenny Skutnik of Lorton, Virginia on Oct. 2.

Lenny Skutnik became famous January 13 when he saved the life of Priscills Tirado, who was a passenger on the Air-Florida flight that crashed into the Potomac River.

Lenny, along with his wife, Linda, and two sons, Mitchell and Glen accepted the Life-Saving Award presented by the local Woodmen of the World-Camp 71 and Grove 6073. The presentation was made by State Manager, Paul H. Smith.

This award will be another of more than 40 awards or plaques that have been presented to Lenny since Jan. 13.

Lenny and his family have become good friends with Priscilla Tirado since the accident in January. Priscilla lost her husband and two-month old baby in the same accident.

Halloween will be on Oct. 30

Halloween will be celebrated a day early this year, on Saturday, Oct. 30, according to the Appomattox Board of Supervisors and the Town Council.

Ghosts, goblins, monsters, ghouls, fiends and other Halloween types are asked to do their trick-or-treating on Saturday night, according to local governing bodies.

Officials remind parents to take the necessary precautions with trick-or-treaters, particularly regarding young children.

Trick-or-treat night was changed to Saturday because the traditional Halloween date, Oct. 31, falls on a Sunday this year.
